TEST AT WELLS ARE PROMISING

Water Forced Out in Good Stream When Air Pressure Exerted

Tests at the city wells to determine whether an abundant supply of city water can be obtained through the use of compressed air, will be completed today. Upon the report of the findings, which will be prepared by engineers during the coming week, will depend whether Ogden will be given a supply for years at a small cost or whether huge sums will have to be expended to construct water projects in South Park country.

The tests so far are extremely promising, the engineers reported this morning, although nothing definite can be known until the final figures are submitted.

FLOW INCREASED
Yesterday the pumping apparatus was hooked to the largest flowing well and within a few moments the normal natural flow was increased from 192 gallons a minute to 600 gallons a minute. This same average can be gained from the other wells, it was shown.

It is now definitely known that the flow can be increased through the use of compressed air, but the amount of water available under the wells has not yet been determined and can only be ascertained through the effect on the natural flow of wells while the pumps are being used on another.

Figures obtained during the tests are expected to give the engineers some definite information in regard to the subterranean water supply available.

The tests on the largest city well yesterday afternoon were watched closely by the engineers, government representatives, and professors who are at the scene of action. The normal flow filled the pipe connecting the well but half before the pressure was applied. The natural flow fell from the pipe straight downward to the ground.

WATER SHOTS OUT

A few minutes after the compressed air was applied, the flow jumped to a point where it completely filled the pipe and shot from the nozzle for several feet before touching the ground. Large amounts of sand and accumulations which have formed in former years at the bottom of the wells and have retarded the natural flow, were brought up by the compressed air and the wells entirely cleared out.

The equipment used for the tests was furnished through the experimental station of the Utah Agricultural college, as well as the engine men and professors. Government representatives, including L. M. Winsor of the United States department of agriculture, and many professors from the agricultural college took part in the tests. Joseph M. Tracy, city engineer, compiled many of the figures.

When the report is completed it will be turned over to Mr. Tracy. Decision will then be made as to whether the city will provide a pumping plant to accelerate the flow for use by the city.

New Forest Official Here About Sept. 15

District Forester J. H. Rutledge, recently appointed as head of the fourth forest service district with headquarters in Ogden, has written that he will be unable to report to the Ogden office before September 15 or October 1.

Mr. Rutledge requested, it is reported, that Assistant Forester L. F. Kneipp remain in Ogden until his arrival.

The arrangement, it is reported, has been approved by the Washington headquarters of the forest service.

Sacred Heart Will Reopen on Sept. 7

Offering complete academic and commercial courses, music, art, domestic science, physical education, the Sacred Heart academy of Ogden will reopen for the fall term on September 7.

This school, a Catholic institution, draws pupils from all sections of the intermountain country.

With all cases disposed of and nothing scheduled on the court calendar, both divisions of the district court are out of action for the time being. No court will be held before Friday, August 27, in either division, it was announced today.

Judge A. W. Agee declared this morning that his division was out of cases and until the next setting, August 27, no sessions will be held. The same situation is true in Judge A. E. Pratt's division.

Judge Pratt is in Farmington today conducting court sessions.

GRAZING RIGHTS CROP UP AGAIN

Payson Man Writes Concerning Privileges on Forest Service Lands

Editor Standard-Examiner,
Dear Sir:—
While here in your city on a business trip my attention was called to an article in your new little paper under the caption of "Grazing Action Defended." The article goes on to state that the majority of the stockmen are in favor of what is known as Mr. Kneipp's palatability theory. I am not going to discuss the cattle industry in your columns nor to voice an attack on the forest service as a whole—but seriously—this palatability theory is a joke amongst cattle and sheep men, as every practical stockman knows that palatability of forage entirely depends on age, altitude, breed of stock, appetite, health, shelter, seasonal changes, salt, and water. Broad statements as to grazing experiments made by inexperienced men, however good their intentions, cannot be taken against the actual experience of intelligent men, as I claim the stockmen of Utah to be, who have their money invested in the industry and who cannot afford to have their interests jeopardized by theorists.

However, as Mr. Kneipp is, according to our Washington advisers, shortly to be transferred from this district to a practical western man slated for his place, we are in hopes that HIS ideas on "palatability" may be based on better and sounder common sense ideas than his predecessors', and that the stock industry may be relieved of one of its many troubles.

J. T. Barnett,
Payson, Utah.

NO SHORTAGE IN TEACHERS HERE

Supt. Fowler Says Utah Schools Well Supplied; Other States Seek Pedagogues

While other states are scrambling to get enough teachers to take care of the school children for the ensuing year, Utah seems to be well supplied, according to B. A. Fowler, superintendent of the Weber county consolidated school system.

"All positions in our schools have been filled for several weeks and I am still receiving applications from persons who desire positions in the schools," Mr. Fowler said. "Yesterday I received seven."

"It seems that many of the most experienced teachers held off until the last in the hope that they could demand top salary and the better situations. Many of the applications that I get now are from teachers more experienced than those I have retained."

Each of these teachers seems to have waited too long, for most of the superintendents with whom I have talked say they are about filled up. A representative of a teacher employment bureau asked me for a list of positions I had open. He was surprised when I told him I was filled up and had about thirty applications on my desk. He was eager to get the names of the applicants that he might offer them positions in the middle western states, where there are so many vacancies.

The editorial in the Standard-Examiner, describing the situation among the school systems of the nation, is undoubtedly true. The United States does not apply to Utah.

"Utah, just now, seems to be a hot bed where teachers are produced."

THOUGHT EVERY MAN AN OFFICER

Escaped Convict From Boise Pen, Gives Himself Up Here

Unable to shake off the feeling that officers were pursuing him, and in a nervous state of mind as a result, Leo Deem, who escaped from the Boise penitentiary last October with two other convicts, walked into the sheriff's office here Sunday and gave himself up. The conviction was gained from the sheriff's deputy for the first time today when a deputy from the Boise penitentiary arrived to take the man back to prison.

The officers here say that Deem voluntarily came to the sheriff's office and asked to be held for the Boise officers. He explained that he could not shake off the thought that every man he passed on the street was an officer searching for him and he felt that it would be but a short time before he was captured. He said he was tired of wandering about while worried about arrest and wanted to be returned so that his mind could be eased.

The two other men who escaped with Deem have not been captured. Deem will be taken back to the Boise prison this afternoon.

Case Against Gray Ordered Dismissed

Steve Gray, manager of the Minerva cafe, charged with assault and battery, will not have to answer to the charge, the complaint against him having been dismissed upon recommendation of Assistant City Attorney Samuel Powell.

Gray, it is stated, was thought to have struck Whitney Johnson on the head. Doubt regarding Johnson's aggressor has arisen, however, and because of lack of evidence, the case against Gray was dropped.

CARD OF THANKS
We desire to express our heartfelt gratitude for the many kindnesses, aid and sympathy extended to us by our friends and neighbors in the late illness and death of our beloved baby, Lucille, and we hope that they may be recipients of such kindness in their hour of bereavement.

TRUCK CARAVAN GOES TO NORTH

Bureau of Public Roads Equipment Leaves for Idaho Project

Seven two-ton Pierce-Arrow trucks, property of the United States Bureau of Public Roads and assigned to the Twelfth district, departed shortly after 9 o'clock today for the Dustin bridge, 165 miles north of Boise, Ida., where they will be used to aid in the construction work in that section.

The caravan leaving Ogden was in charge of Z. B. Compton. Seven drivers, out at the wheel of each truck, together with Compton, departed on the long journey, which will require more than six days of traveling time.

Tools of various natures, to be used for construction work on the road and bridge, together with cook and camp outfits, tents, grading materials and other road equipment, were loaded in each truck last night in order that the caravan might obtain an early start today.

No matter what the plant of the Bureau of Public Roads, located near Thirty-first and Lincoln, has more than 35 trucks of from one to two ton denominations, equipped with many other phases of road equipment. The plant is in charge of James Jordan.

NEW SCREEN COMEDY CONVULSINGLY FUNNY AT UTAH THEATRE

Certainly one aspect of the critical housing situation has been relieved by the picture which had its premiere at the Utah theatre last evening, "Parlor Bedroom and Bath." It provides more room for laughs than any offering on the screen since such productions as "Fair and Warmer."

No matter what the reader is a little behind in his account with the milk company, or has to make a payment on the old mortgage on the farm or whether his wife insists on a new automobile to match the spring hat of apple-green straw, he should see this picture. It is a delight, an oasis of sparkling cleverness amid the dryness of modern life.

Consider the play—written originally by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan—at least the start of it, the young husband, wishing to make himself out a little wild man, contriving to stain his own reputation by having the society reporter write about him scandalously, because the wife wanted a rounder and a rouer. Of course she discovers the fraud, and of course—but it's not fair to spoil it.

The picture will be shown again today and tomorrow in conjunction with a comedy that with your special effort, "Mary Little Lobster."

Sells Cigarettes To Minor; Fined $60

"If ever there was a curse to the world it is cigarettes and the man in the world who sells cigarettes to boys is detestable."

Judge D. R. Roberts made the above statement in the city court this morning, following the conviction of John Derocco, who pleaded guilty to selling tobacco to minors. Derocco was fined $60 or 60 days.

Derocco's wife, it is said, sold a package of cigarettes to Frank Johnson, a minor. Cowlishaw upon being lectured by a policeman on the evils of cigarette smoking, said he could get them at any little store in the city. Derocco's store was just across the street and it is claimed that the boy experienced little difficulty in procuring the cigarettes.

Derocco assumed blame for his wife's alleged offense.
